They are: (1) Helping visionaries become influencers and helping influencers become visionaries; (2) Helping leaders see the future of the world, of ideas, products, services, industries and markets; and supporting them to take their stake in it; (3) Helping Individuals and families find their personal meaning and purpose, maximise their humanity and live out the best version of themselves; (4) Helping high achievers pivot or disrupt their highest accomplishments and birthing their necessary next level of relevance and power. (5) Helping thought leaders find their voice and spread their message to the exact people and places designed for it, anywhere in the world.

Olakunle Soriyan is the Chief Knowledge Officer and Lead Strategist at KENNETH SORIYAN RESEARCH AND IDEAS LLC. He is also the founder of ESHIRYA-Africa, a US 501(c)(3) Exempt Non-Profit mobilising and empowering 1% of the African population and people of African decent everywhere to function beyond welfare economics, equipped to take responsibility for their socioeconomic and political destiny to the continent. He also serves as CEO of AFRICA HOUSE, a platform linking investors with entrepreneurs and innovators of African descent. PK's skills have served arms of governments and many organizations in different parts of the world including Fortune500 companies like CoCaCola, Microsoft, Total, Shell and many more. PK also serves on the board of several For-Profit and Non-Profit organizations.

The "Ruckus" as he is called by industry colleagues and stakeholders wears many hats as a Futurist, Iconoclast, Global Thought Leader, and Global Influence curator; Culture-Shaper, Philanthropist and Social Impact Investor; Advisor to many High Impact Individuals in the world, Mentor and Spiritual Guide to thousands across the globe. His life mission is to impact 80million Global Action Figures shaping culture and making the world a positive and better place in business, government, media, entertainment, family, education and faith by 2050 and beyond.

As a person of faith, Olakunle Soriyan expresses his authentic call helping Christian Leaders and Ministries understand global influence and relevance, culture-shaping, the future of Religion and the Church; and supporting them to define and take their position in it. In his calling as a Teacher, Apologetic, Prophet, PK is an Iconoclast. His conversations disrupts cherished beliefs and institutions. He is a rugged individualist, bold thinker who does not in anyway glorify traditions. He agrees with the notion that tradition is mostly peer pressure from dead people; and that newness is always within reach. To him, "we must not be so loyal to what is working and prevailing, and forget it is going to change."

Olakunle Soriyan is happily married to his beautiful wife, Tiwa; and they are both blessed with a son, David. The family lives in Plano, Texas.

WHY I EXIST:

8-PWAs.. The Meaning I Was Born For.

I have one head like every human being. However, I have eight eyes and while others are free to see other areas, i see only eight areas in life, regardless of what I am doing per time or whom I am with or where I am. I call them my 8-Power Work Areas (8-PWAs). I am convinced that nobody needs a bunch of keys to open a door; we need only one key...the right one. The implication is that nobody needs to know all that can be known or attempt to do all that can be done. This is the justification for diversity and continuity---the idea that contribution is a human right; and the human spirit is blessed with the natural ability to do only what it can do best, and bask in the privilege of enjoying the best of others in other areas. I also call it participatory ideology---the truth that the best of what the world must experience is trapped in each of us in parts; and that through mutual respect, and honor for all that we do not understand, we can passionately focus on what we can do as individuals and celebrate the natural passion of our souls to change the world. Yet, that as we do so, we consciously connect with the contributions and difference only others around us can supply.

I have therefore accepted that what I can do is what I should do; and I am totally at peace with what I cannot do, because with the little I can do, my existence will have no moment idle. Below are what I see and the part of the world I am born to serve and transform:

1 Eliminating the ignorance, fear and opacity that works to perpetuates the negatives in Africa and keeps the people weak and small.

2 Inspiring and supporting young people across the globe to rise to their highest meaning and purpose; strengthening communities, blending diversities by destroying the walls of ethnic and religious prejudice, in the defense and promotion of one humanity,

3 Promoting stewardship of private property across the world, as the practical hope for stewardship of public property, particularly in the so-called Third World.

4 Empowering and prioritizing entrepreneurial, innovative and non-profit activities well above politicians and political parties as the truest and most powerful drivers of measurable and sustainable socioeconomic transformation in nations anywhere.

5 Defining and scaling education away from academics, refocusing entertainment, the media, fashion and culinary arts as culture-shaping instruments of positive change and dominance across the world.

6 Defending and promoting family education and the family unit as the bedrock of society

7 Mobilizing the African Diaspora (including African Americans and people of African descent anywhere) to understand, accept and rise to their socioeconomic and political destiny in the continent.

8 Teaching and advocating the end of religion in the world as it is known today, and penetrating the expansion and growth of faith and spirituality at the highest level possible.

This is why I exist. It is timeless and will never change!
